Joint medical readiness training part of Beyond the Horizon-Panama

By Robert R. Ramon
Army South Public Affairs

Army and Air Force medical professionals took part in a three-day medical readiness training exercise in Cerro Plata, Panama, April 15 through 18 as part of Beyond the Horizon-Panama 2013.

The MEDRETE provided humanitarian, medical, dental and veterinary services to thousands of citizens in the area.

"This exercise was designed to help strengthen relationships and build partner-nation capacity, while providing real-world training to U.S. service members," said Air Force Lt. Col. Randall Ivall, MEDRETE officer in charge, assigned to Wilford Hall Ambulatory Surgical Center at Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland.

"We have a multifunctional medical team with specialists in pediatrics, dentistry, optometry, obstetrics and gynecology, dermatology, a full capability pharmacy and veterinarians," Ivall said.

Beyond the Horizon-Panama 2013 deploys U.S. military engineers and medical professionals to Panama for training, while providing services to rural communities, such as medical, dental and engineering support.

Conducted annually, the exercise is part of the U.S. Army South and SOUTHCOM humanitarian and civic assistance program.

During the four-month BTH exercise, the MEDRETEs consist of a team of military medical and dental professionals who work in austere areas to gain valuable military experience.

The exercises have provided care to hundreds of thousands of people. Service members have built or renovated dozens of facilities in the U.S. Southern Command area of responsibility.

"We have about 50 Air Force and Army personnel at this particular MEDRETE site," Ivall said. "We're anticipating about 500 patients per day during our three-day stay."

"We then move to two other locations after this and we expect to treat more than 8,500 patients within the next two weeks," Ivall said.

"We're partnering with Panama's Ministry of Health during this MEDRETE in order to provide the most effective services to the local population."

"The Ministry of Health is providing the citizens with some basic medical education before sending them to our triage area where we can determine their medical needs."

Ivall said the MEDRETE ben-

Air Force, Army physician assistants hone emergency medicine training

By Staff Sgt. Josie Walck
59th Medical Wing Public Affairs

The recent graduation of nine physician assistant residents at Baylor University marked the first time Army and Air Force physician assistants completed graduate-level training together.

The emergency medicine physician assistant fellowship program integrated joint education and training for emergency medicine physician assistants or EMPAs.

The doctoral program focuses on preparing EMPAs to diagnose and stabilize conditions that pose an immediate threat to life, limb or sight.

The 18-month residen-

Participants of the emergency medicine physician assistant residency program pose for a photo at the EMPA graduation on Dec. 15 at Baylor University in Waco, Texas.

The program graduated its inaugural class of six Air Force and three Army physician assistants during a ceremony Dec. 15 at Baylor University's campus in Waco, Texas.

"The physician assistant profession has come a long way since it was founded in 1965," said Maj. Timothy Bonjour, EMPA residency program director at the San Antonio Military Medical Center

"The residency program aims to be the premier post-professional physician assistant residency in the country by providing training in state-of-the-art, advanced care for emergency situations," Bonjour said.

"It expands the footprint of emergency medicine, and benefits the Air Force by providing PAs with enhanced skill sets that complement the emergency medicine physician, especially in a high ops tempo environment. Acceptance into the PA residency program is highly competitive," he said.

"Active-duty Army and Air Force physician assistants are selected after meeting an Air Force Institute of Technology selection board, or Army equivalent board," Bonjour added. "Applicants must earn a minimum score of 297 on their graduate requirement examination, as well as meet other service-specific requirements."

Once selected, PAs attend the 18-month residency program at SAM-MC. The residency ends with mid-term and final written examinations as well as oral boards. Successful completion earns participants a doctor of science clinical degree, EMPA studies, from Baylor University.

"The experience improves medical skills and gives physician assistants greater knowledge to serve our patients and help save lives stateside or in a deployed environment," Bonjour said.

VA launches hotline for health care, women veteran questions

The Veterans Affairs Department has launched a new hotline at 855-VA-WOMEN to receive and respond to questions from veterans, their families and caregivers about the many VA services and resources available to women veterans.

The service began accepting calls March 27.

"Some women veterans may not know about high-quality VA care and services available to them," said VA Secretary Eric K. Shinseki. "The hotline will allow us to field their questions and provide critical information about the latest enhancements in VA services."

The hotline is staffed by VA employees who can provide information about benefits, including health care services for women, officials said. Callers can be linked to information on claims, education or health care appointments, as well as information about VA cemeteries and memorial benefits.

Staff members can answer urgent questions and provide referrals to mental health and homeless services and Vet Center information.

Women make up nearly 15 percent of today's active duty military and 18 percent of National Guard and Reserve forces. The number of women using VA health care was nearly 160,000 in 2000, and that number more than doubled to 354,000 in 2012.

Based on the upward trend of women in all branches of military service, VA officials said, the number of women veterans using VA services will keep climbing.

As part of its commitment to making improvements for the growing population of women veterans, officials noted, VA established an outbound call center in 2010 to contact women veterans and encourage them to enroll in VA health care.

"In VA health care alone, women constitute only 6 percent of VA patients, but those veterans have a high perception of the quality care they are receiving," said Irene Trowell-Harris, director of VA's Center for Women Veterans.

"Many women who served don't self-identify as veterans, and therefore don't think they qualify for VA benefits. We need to correct existing misinformation and misperceptions so we can serve more women veterans with the benefits they've earned."

Women veterans are entitled to apply for the same benefits as their male counterparts, which include health care and pharmacy benefits as well as education benefits, disability compensation, home loans, employment assistance and more.

The 855-VA-WOMEN hotline joins numerous other VA hotlines that provide critical information and assistance to veterans, such as those for veterans in crisis and in danger of becoming homeless.

Veterans also can receive information and apply for benefits online at <http://www.eBenefits.va.gov> and manage their health care at <http://My-HealtheVet.va.gov>.

MRI Brain Study

The Wilford Hall Ambulatory Surgery Center is seeking volunteers to take part in an MRI brain study sponsored by the Air Force Surgeon General's office. Applicants need to be active duty, between 26 and 50 years old and have a doctorate-level education. The study will provide a normative baseline allowing comparison to high-resolution MRI abnormalities already detected in Air Force pilots. Call 292-0476 for more information.

Post-9/11 GI Bill Changes

A briefing on changes to the Post-9/11 GI Bill is from 10 to 11:30 a.m. May 10 at the auditorium in the Roadrunner Community Center, Building 2797, 3060 Stanely Road on Joint Base San Antonio-Fort Sam Houston. The briefing is open to all service members and their family members. After an initial briefing, the floor will be open for questions and answers. Call 221-2800 for more information.

Odierno met with several injured warriors and their families in the ISR.

The general thanked them for their service and ensured they were receiving the best medical care.

"It's an honor to meet you," he said to Sgt. 1st Class Christopher Edwards, who has burns on 80 percent of his body from an improvised explosive device blast in 2005.

Next on the list was the Center for the Intrepid, where Odierno reunited with four of the nine Purple Heart recipients he presented here in December 2011. They suffered multiple combat injuries from an efits the local populace as well as the U.S. service members running the event.

"The benefit for the local citizens is that they receive high-quality medical treatment," Ivall said.

"The benefit for us is that it strengthens our partnerships and allows us exposure to medical conditions we might not necessarily see in a clinic setting back at home station.

"If we can get a unit down here to provide treatment, we can do it in Afghanistan or anywhere else in the world."

Air Force Col. Mary Pelszynski, a pediatrician stationed at the San Antonio Military Medical Center at JBSA-Fort Sam Houston, said the MEDRETE has gone smoothly so far.

"It has been wonderful," Pelszynski said.

"The Ministry of Health in Panama has been very organized and helpful and the patients are extremely appreciative."

Pelszynski said she gains personal satisfaction with each patient she treats.

"It's about being able to improve one life at a time," Pelszynski said.

"Whether you're helping them with a fever, pain or giving the children vitamins to help them grow and become healthy adults, it's an effort to help them achieve their potential."

The Airmen and Soldiers involved have performed superbly so far, according to Ivall.

"They have been outstanding," Ivall said. "This is a blended team of Airmen and Soldiers and they have been knocking it out of the park."

Army South has planned and conducted

BTHs since 2008 in countries such as the Dominican Republic, Guatemala and Honduras.

In addition to Panama, BTH is also taking place simultaneously in El Salvador.

The exercise is scheduled to be conducted in the Dominican Republic and Guatemala in 2014.

This year, U.S. forces, working with the approval of the governments of El Salvador and Panama, selected several sites to provide engineering, medical and dental support.

U.S. forces will work alongside host-nation personnel as well as a variety of government and non-government organizations to build schools, clinics and conduct MEDRETEs.

Each BTH typically involves and trains about 1,400 U.S. service members and 150 host-nation personnel.

Planning key to success in hurricane preparation

By Sgt. Lee Ezzell
Army North Public Affairs

More than 250 representatives from approximately 20 different Department of Defense, federal, state and international organizations gathered together April 9 through 11 at Joint Base San Antonio-Fort Sam Houston to rehearse for the 2013 hurricane season.

The group reflected on the lessons learned from Hurricane Sandy, as well as other past disasters, and sought new ways to improve on future response operations if called upon to provide much-needed support.

"This really should set up the Department of Defense to be able to respond to, and really support, those first responders out there who may need help," said Lt. Gen. William Caldwell IV, the commanding general of U.S. Army North (Fifth Army) and senior commander of Fort Sam Houston and Camp Bullis.

Caldwell said he has high expectations of those gathered as the beginning of hurricane season nears.

"This is just the beginning of preparation," he said.

A majority of hurricane strikes occur on the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts during the summer and early fall each year. This has been the case in recent history.

With the mission of helping to ensure hurricane preparedness for the Department of Defense, ARNORTH, as the U.S. Northern Command's standing Joint Lt. Gen. William Caldwell IV (left) listens as Tom Lacrosse (center), along with Marine Lt. Gen. Steven Hummer, responds to a question April 11 during the senior leader session for the 2013 Hurricane Rehearsal at Joint Base San Antonio-Fort Sam Houston. More than 250 representatives from approximately 20 different Department of Defense, federal, state and international organizations filled the Rehearsal of Concept facility to reflect on the lessons learned from Hurricane Sandy, as well as other past disasters and sought new ways to improve on future response operations if called upon to provide much-needed support. Caldwell is the commanding general of U.S. Army North (Fifth Army) and senior commander of Fort Sam Houston and Camp Bullis. Lacrosse is the director of Defense Support of Civil Authorities and Hummer is the commanding general of Marine Forces North.

Force Land Component Command, provided an environment to bring together the DOD agencies, federal and state authorities and their partner agencies, to rehearse their collective actions through a hurricane response scenario.

This rehearsal is one of the key components in helping to ensure the partners are ready to respond effectively during a hurricane event.

As with any rehearsal, it provides an opportunity to identify potential problems now instead of trying to resolve those issues in the middle of a disaster – when lives are at stake.

One of the advantages of these exercises is the opportunity to learn about the capabilities and special skills the other organizations possess, said Lt. Col. Juan Garcia, branch chief of logistics operations for the National Guard Bureau.

"There are perceptions out there among some federal agencies that individual states can't handle a major domestic operation," Garcia said.

"Some states feel like any federal response means the federal government wants to come in, take charge and take over. Going through this rehearsal, we can eliminate these perceptions or misconceptions."

The bottom line, said the gathered leaders, is that the mission comes first.

Although each of the different partners have their own specific operating procedures, it is only through working together that they can succeed.

"There are definitely some friction points, but we are working through them," said Col. Robert Spano, director, joint staff, California National Guard.

What also makes exercises such as this even more challenging is that in addition to the differences in the ways the federal agencies operate versus the state agencies, there are also dramatic differences in how each state operates.

"Each state has its own history, its own culture, its own experiences and its operating procedures," said Col. Scott Macleod, director, operations, Texas Military Forces.

"We all know though, that at the end of the day, we are all Americans trying to help our fellow Americans in the best way we know how."

As the conference drew to a close, Joe Girot, federal coordinating officer cadre member, Region IV, Federal Emergency Response Agency, said he believed that the overarching issues had been dealt with.

"We have covered numerous areas, but this has been a huge success," he said. "I think we have (addressed) the strategic issues that we, as leaders, should."

Caldwell said he was pleased with the success of bringing the partners together.

"I really am just proud to have each of these groups working together to build the critical relationships and understanding of capabilities that will pay off when the next disaster strikes our nation."

Special operations commander calls wounded warriors, caregivers 'inspiring'

Navy Adm. William H. McRaven, commander of U.S. Special Operations Command, visits with Army Capt. Larkin O'Hern, a triple amputee, at the Center for the Intrepid April 15. The CFI is Brooke Army Medical Center's state-of-the-art rehabilitation center for wounded service members.

Brooke Army Medical Center's staff and facilities are "just phenomenal," said the commander of U.S. Special Operations Command during his tour of the San Antonio Military Medical Center April 15.

On his first visit here as SOCOM commander, Navy Adm. William H. McRaven visited with wounded service members, their families and staff in the hospital, which is BAMC's inpatient facility, as well as the Center for the Intrepid, BAMC's state-of-the-art rehabilitation center.

"I've traveled all around the world [and]

I never cease to be amazed, never cease to be inspired by these young kids and their families, and the doctors and caregivers who support them," he said.

In the hospital, the admiral donned scrubs to visit with injured warriors in the Institute of Surgical Research Burn Center and an inpatient ward, lingering by bedsides to chat with their parents and wives.

In the CFI, McRaven watched intently as Marine Cpl. Ivan Sears, a double-leg amputee, virtually shot at an enemy using arm movements via a video game system while standing on his prostheses.

In the aquatic room, Army Staff Sgt. Michael McCallum and Pfc. Chris Haley, both amputees, showed off their surfing moves, including barrel rolls, in the wave pool.

McRaven also spoke with patients who benefited from a leg brace called the intrepid dynamic exoskeletal orthosis, or IDEO.

The IDEO, created by CFI prosthetist Ryan Blanck, offers service members who suffered lower leg injuries greater mobility, including the ability to run.

While there, the admiral, who grew up in San Antonio, joked about sports teams with fellow Texan Army Capt. Larkin O'Hern, a triple amputee.

After his tour, McRaven praised the wounded warriors' courage, while also noting the contributions of their caregivers.

"The staff and volunteers [are] absolutely magnificent," he said.

Seeing them at work,

he added, "makes you proud to be an American."

Medical Education and Training Campus awarded national accreditation

By Lisa Braun
METC Public Affairs

The Medical Education and Training Campus was recently granted accreditation status by the Council on Occupational Education.

The COE accredits post-secondary occupational institutions that offer certificate, diploma or applied associate degree programs. Institutional accreditation is recognized by the U.S. Department of Education.

"I am intensely proud of the entire METC team, especially our standards and evaluation personnel, for their contributions to this singular achievement," said Navy

Rear Adm. Bill Roberts, METC commandant.

Since becoming a national accrediting agency in 1995, the COE assures quality and integrity in career and technical education. The Council's accreditation process is conducted on behalf of more than 181,000 students across the nation pursuing careers in a variety of technical fields.

Accreditation is a status of recognition that is granted to an institution which complies with the eligibility requirements, standards and obligations adopted by the member institutions of the COE.

It demonstrated that METC meets not only the COE standards of quality, but also the needs of students and employers.

The evaluation process included an extensive self-study performed by METC and an intensive review by a visiting team of professional educators representing the COE's member institutions from other states.

Army Col. Larry Hanson, METC's dean of academics, credits the hard work and detailed preparation by METC personnel for this achievement.

"The highly successful COE accreditation survey was only accomplished through the meticulous preparatory work the staff and programs did preparing METC's responses to the 10 COE standards," Hanson said. "METC would not have been successful without the hard work and support of the entire Campus."

Institutional membership in COE can only be achieved by becoming accredited.

There are more than 400 institutional members, including postsecondary public technical institutes, specialized military and national defense schools, Job Corps Centers, private career schools, non-profit technical education providers, corporate and industry education units and federal agency institutions.

National Child Abuse Prevention Month: Child abuse doesn't discriminate

By Estella R. Ibarra
JBSA Family Advocacy Program

April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month. Additionally, it is the Month of the Military Child as former Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger first designated it in April 1986.

Each April, Family Advocacy, along with base helping agencies and local community partners bring attention to building and supporting healthy environments for children.

This year's theme for Child Abuse Awareness Month is "Pinwheels for Prevention." This campaign is aimed at changing the way people think about preventing child abuse and neglect.

For more information about the theme, click on <http://www.pinwheelsfor-prevention.org>.

Child abuse doesn't discriminate and knows no socioeconomic boundaries, including military families. Child abuse refers to physical, emotional or sexual maltreatment.

Although physical signs of child abuse may not be visible, the long-lasting effects can have serious consequences.

These effects may last generations if not properly tended to, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

DHHS data shows that over a year's time, more than 1 million children are affected by child abuse and neglect, which costs our nation an average of $220 million every day for investigations, foster care, medical and mental health treatment.

Some challenges which increase the risk of child abuse and neglect are embedded within the community and family.

Community causes of child abuse refer to stressful situations brought on by living arrangements and lifestyles that cause stress within a family, to include poverty, unemployment, social isolation and lack of an adequate support system.

Family causes of child abuse include adult domestic violence, substance abuse and parents who have been abused themselves and are continuing the cycle.

According to <http://> childhelp.org, "about 30 percent of abused and neglected children will later abuse their own children."

Frequent moves, extended family separations through deployments and complicated reintegration issues make life challenging for military children and their families.

Often military children are looked up to for their resilience and ability to deal with life-changing events, but this does not diminish the impact on children.

Families can benefit from engaging in awareness, education and application of the tools necessary to promote wellbeing for all.

The six protective factors that influence optimum physical and emotional health of children and families are:

- Nurturing and attachment,
- Knowledge of parenting and of child and youth development,
- Parental resilience,
- Social connections,
- Concrete supports for parents and
- Social and emotional developmental well-being.

Joint Base San Antonio is promoting the awareness and prevention of child abuse and neglect. Some of the classes and activities include:

- Scream-Free Parenting, Monday, 9 a.m., Warfighter and Family Readiness, Building 2797.
- Safety Seat Clinic, Tuesday, 1 p.m. JBSA-FSH Fire Station, Building 3830.
- Building Effective Anger Management Skills, Tuesday, 5 p.m., Building 2620.
- Helping us Grow Securely or HUGS, play groups, Tuesdays and Thursdays, Middle School Teen Center, Building 2515.

Report suspected abuse to the JBSA Family Advocacy Program at 292-5967 or the Texas Child Abuse Reporting Hotline at 800-252-5400. # Army changes requirements for transfer of GI Bill benefits

By C. Todd Lopez
Army News Service

Beginning Aug. 1, every Soldier who elects to transfer their Post-9/11 GI Bill benefits to a family member will incur an additional four years in the Army, without regard to their time in service.

That news comes in a message to military personnel, dated April 15.

The new rule largely affects senior officers and enlisted Soldiers who are retirement-eligible.

As of now, these Soldiers may be able to transfer benefits to their loved ones with anywhere from zero to three years of additional service.

Soldiers who are not retirement eligible, electing to transfer their GI Bill benefits to a family member means re-upping for an additional four years. Come Aug. 1, that rule will apply to all Soldiers, whether they are retirement-eligible or not.

"The Post-9/11 GI Bill is a benefit. Soldiers are entitled to the benefit for their own use, but to transfer to dependents: that is used as a recruiting and retention tool," said Lt. Col. Mark Viney, chief of the Enlisted Professional Development Branch, Army G-1.

Viney also serves as the policy proponent for the Army's Post-9/11 GI Bill Transfer of Education Benefits Program.

"We want Soldiers to be informed of the impact of this change, which is a clause of existing policy that is expiring," Viney said. "This is going to impact their decisions and their families, and whether or not they are going to have this money available to fund their dependent's education."

Veterans Affairs, or VA, also has eligibility requirements for transferability. A Soldier must have six years of active duty in order to transfer his GI Bill benefits.

In some cases, if a Soldier has incurred additional time in service in order to transfer GI Bill benefits to a family member and is afterward unable to serve that additional time in service, he or she may be required to pay back those benefits.

Viney said that as the Army draws down, some Soldiers will be involuntarily separated under force-shaping initiatives. Soldiers who are separated early under such circumstances and who had previously transferred their Post-9/11 GI Bill education benefits to their dependents may retain the transferred benefits, without needing to repay them to the VA.

Sexual Assault Awareness Month

If it isn't you, it's the person next to you

By Senior Airman Kelly Galloway
439th Airlift Wing Public Affairs
Westover Air Reserve Base, Mass.

"Hey sexy ... you single?"
I turned to see a fellow Airman in training; standing about 5 foot 8 inches tall, dark hair and eyes. Over the next four months, I heard this fellow classmate repeat the same line more than a couple dozen times.

It wasn't just me he had an eye for; it was a handful of my new girlfriends as well. We laughed it off. All of us had just completed basic training and were beginning another chapter in our brand-new military careers at technical school. Why make enemies at the start?

About a month in, I grew tired of the cheesy pick-up lines and over-used sexual innuendos. I asked one of our ropes (student leader) to step in to have a chat with the guy regarding how uncomfortable he made me.

Unfortunately, that chat didn't have much of an effect on the Airman and as "luck" would have it, I sat next to him during class.

Lucky me, right?

I was pretty good at letting his suggestive comments flow in one ear and out the other, careful not to show it bothered me (as that only added fuel to his fire).

I stopped kissing you back.
I pushed your hand away.
I said I wanted to leave.
It all meant "NO."

Up to this point, his words were the only offensive thing he had been doing. But then I dropped my pencil. As I stooped over to pick it up I heard a loud voice boom throughout the classroom.

"Are you serious, Airman?"

Startled, I nearly smacked my head off the table trying to sit back up. With our entire class now looking back toward us, our two class leaders, Marines, shrugged them away and stated "We'll talk about this at break – carry on."

Unbeknownst to me, this guy had just executed one of the foulest and most sexually suggestive hand gestures behind my head. The class leaders luckily sat behind us and saw what he had just done.

That was the final straw. The class leaders already knew how annoyed I was by his behavior and asked if I wanted to take this latest development "up the chain."

I had no intention of getting anyone in trouble since we were all brand new to the military. I'd hoped that the class leaders had scared him enough by this point and decided against it – asking only to move seats to get away from him.

With my new location in the classroom, I felt a bit more at ease. Although the Airman now had one of his male friends start to jeer me because I had gotten him in trouble. I felt beaten and angry. I had no control over the situation. It wasn't "my" fault he did what he did.

He was lucky I didn't take it up the chain of command.

About a week after the hand gesture incident, I'd had it with the remarks from him and his friend. That's when I asked one of our former ropes in our dormitory to have a talk with these two guys.

This former rope commanded the respect of all the guys in the Airman dormitory; certainly he would be able to have an impact on this guy. Shortly after the discussion this time, the jokes and rude remarks stopped altogether. The Airman and his friend now completely avoided me. Victory at last!

Three months later, two weeks before our class graduation date, a female instructor came up to me as I was on my way back from a class assignment.

"Airman Galloway, follow me please," she said.

I proceeded down the hallway and into a small room with a handful of computers and two girls from my class already in place.

Confusion and a spark of panic overcame me when the door was shut behind me and I realized something serious was going on. One of the female Airmen had been crying and her eyes were still puffy and red.

"Galloway, as I understand, you had a harassment issue with a particular Airman?" my instructor asked.

I acknowledged her question and explained my experience with the group and asked why this was just coming to light as the incident happened nearly three months prior.

Her response shook me to the core as she explained that the two female Airmen, fellow classmates, had just had the same type of harassment, only it had gone above what this man had done to me.

The Airman allegedly grabbed one of the girls and cornered her in an area where we kept our equipment. He put his hand over her mouth and pushed her back against the lockers – pressing his body against hers and proceeded to kiss his hand in a suggestive way.

This was why I was being called into the room. The other girl was witness to what happened and they both wanted to open an investigation after speaking with the sexual assault response coordinator on base.

They knew I had been in a situation and wanted to know if I also wanted to open an investigation.

I realized that what was thought to be simple, but annoying, joking was turning into something much more serious.

How much more would his behavior deteriorate? What if I had reported this incident when it happened to me? Would this still have happened to this girl?

The thoughts in my mind raced. I agreed to speak to the sexual assault response coordinator.

The concept of an entire office committed to sexual assault boggled me.

I had no idea what was in store as the three of us walked into the SARC office to again explain what happened. To my relief, the officer was approachable and sincere; she made every effort to ease our minds and explained what was going to happen.

All three of us had to give her our written statements separately and without prejudice.

After reviewing our statements, she concluded that there was a definite issue and asked us individually if we wanted to proceed with a restricted or unrestricted report.

A restricted report requires the member to be in status and can only report the incident to medical personnel, SARC or a victim advocate, but an unrestricted report means the member

Sexual Assault Awareness Month

Sexual Assault: Reach out, support is here

By Maj. Daniel R. Katka

Sexual Assault Prevention and Response
Community Relations Program Director

Many people believe that the hardest part for a sexual assault victim, rather than the actual assault, is the medical exam, investigation and/or prosecution that follows.

However, the impact of sexual assault can last a lifetime and the effects are undoubtedly felt when a victim attempts to transition back to their normal functioning, including returning to work, seeing friends and other daily activities.

Both publicly and privately, sexual assault victims struggle daily to adjust to their life after a sexual assault.

Publicly, victims of sexual assault have to interact with others, many of them who may know or find out about the assault. The person may notice others treating them differently. He or she may notice that at work, whispers or chatter stop mid-stream as they move around the working area.

There's a justifiable paranoia victims experience that others are always talking about the assault. Sometimes victims feel isolated because people avoid them. Sometimes people just don't know what to say, what to think or what to believe.

Frequently, victims see these behaviors as a constant judgment from others, and they will frequently isolate themselves. Unfortunately, isolation does not heal the pain as it follows victims everywhere they go.

Privately, victims of sexual assault struggle with the different emotions and thoughts associated with this pain.

A victim may not see the same person in the mirror as they did prior to the assault. Feelings such as hopelessness, emptiness and anxiety are common among sexual assault victims.

Many survivors of sexual assault describe their recovery as finding a "new normal" because post-assault life is forever changed.

Many sexual assault victims suffer with trust and relationship insecurities.

In a relationship, they have problems with intimacy, whether sexual or non-sexual. Many victims start to second guess their decisions on friendships and establishing relationships.

The military recognizes the torment that victims of sexual assault experience. The Joint Base San Antonio community encourages those who are struggling to adjust and heal to reach out to local programs that work with victims and assist them on their road to healing.

The reality is recovering from sexual assault is easier with support from loved ones and professionals who understand the impact sexual violence has on an individual.

Joint Base San Antonio Sexual Assault Prevention and Response program can connect you to local advocates affiliated with your service branch who are there solely to support.

They can act as a voice with first responders and chain of command, as well as connect victims to professional services such as counseling.

Victims can also request that their information remain confidential.

If you are victim of sexual assault who has been struggling, call the Joint Base San Antonio SAPR Hotline at 808-SARC (7272).

You don't have to be alone. We are here to help.

can report the incident to investigative agencies such as the Air Force Office of Special Investigation or security forces, as well as to members in their chain of command such as the first sergeant, supervisor or commander.

All three of us wanted the unrestricted report.

We were sent back to the dormitory after meeting with the SARC to speak with our military training leaders.

Upon arrival, the captain was already waiting for us. As we entered her office, coming to attention and visibly shaken, she asked us to sit down.

Up until this point, we had not had any personal interaction with this busy officer and had grown to fear having to report to her.

"Ladies, first of all I want you to know that you are not alone," she said. "Secondly, I want to assure you that this Airman will be dealt with and I will do everything to ensure your safety and confidentiality of this situation, but you need to ensure the confidentiality on your end as well."

"Yes, Ma'am," we simultaneously squeaked out.

We had already signed confidentiality agreements and were ordered not to talk about the situation to any of our classmates.

After an hour of conversing with the captain, she released us to go back to our rooms to deal with what had just occurred in our own manner. What had started as a normal day had taken such a dramatic turn of events. Our minds were warped. We were mentally exhausted.

A team of OSI agents came to our dormitory as well as military police, who went through the Airman's room seeking incriminating evidence.

They pulled him from class and brought him back to the dorms so that he could pack his belongings.

He was being isolated from the rest of the dorm, moving onto the first floor near our MTL's offices.

We were only two weeks from graduating. Because of this incident, the Airman jeopardized his marriage, his security clearance and his military career.

Beginning in basic training, all of the advice from my military training instructor had prepared me for something like this, though I never thought I would be in-involved in a "SARC" case. It was something we had joked and laughed about training.

Yet my MTI knew better. Before we left his watchful eye, he warned us that an alarming number of technical school

SARC cases do happen and will happen and that we should prepare ourselves. His words still rang in my ear like reveille in the morning.

"If it isn't you, it's the person next to you."

AAFES seeking veterans, families for variety of employment opportunities

While some advertise efforts to hire veterans, the Army and Air Force Exchange Service simply does what it has for more than 117 years – extend career opportunities to veterans and their families.

In fact, 10 percent of the AAFES workforce is comprised of veterans with military spouses and family members accounting for another 24 percent.

With more than 40,000 jobs, the Exchange is doing its part not only to employ veterans and military spouses, but also provide opportunities.

"The Exchange doesn't just hire current and former members of the military community in jobs – we offer careers in service and support," said the Exchange's chief of staff Col. Thomas Ockenfels.

"It's just a natural fit. Veterans, spouses and dependents know our customers better than anyone."

Uniting with the Military Spouse Employment Partnership, Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve and the Wounded Warrior Project, there are 4,196 veteran associates working for the Exchange.

In 2013, the goal is to increase veteran management hires by 33 percent from 2012.

Additionally, partnerships with the Operation Warfighter Program and Feds Hire Vets initiative give the Exchange increased visibility.

Veterans can also apply for the Exchange's "Detail to Retail" management trainee programs, which are designed to train various levels of retail management.

Upon successful completion, participants are assigned to Exchange facilities across the world in a variety of different roles, including store manager, branch store manager, sales area manager and stockroom manager.

Complete details on how veterans and their families can apply for a career with the Exchange are available at <http://www.shopmyexchange.com/AboutExchange/Careers/militaryfamilies.htm>.

This written statement will be acceptable in place of any and all varicella vaccine doses required.

IRS warns donors about charity scams

Following major disasters and tragedies, scam artists impersonate charities to steal money or get private information from well-intentioned taxpayers. Fraudulent schemes involve solicitations by phone, social media, email or in-person.

Scam artists may operate bogus charities that contact people by telephone to solicit money or financial information. Others use emails to steer people to bogus websites which mimic the sites of legitimate charities or use names similar to legitimate charities.

The IRS offers the following tips to help taxpayers who wish to donate to victims of the recent tragedies at the Boston Marathon and a Texas fertilizer plant:

• Donate to qualified charities. Use the Exempt Organizations Select Check tool at <http://www.irs.gov> to find qualified charities. Only donations to qualified charitable organizations are tax-deductible. Find legitimate charities on the Federal Emergency Management Agency website at <http://www.fema.gov>.

• Don't give out personal financial information. Do not give a Social Security number, credit card and bank account numbers and passwords to anyone soliciting contributions. Scam artists use this information to steal an identity and money.

• Don't give or send cash. For security and tax record purposes, contribute by check or credit card or another way that provides documentation of the donation.

• Report suspected fraud. Taxpayers suspecting tax or charity-related fraud should visit <http://www.irs.gov> and perform a search using the keywords "Report Phishing."

New mural takes shape at Keith A. Campbell Memorial Library

By Sharon Andrews
MWR Marketing

With a vibrant palate of interior latex and artist's acrylics, Malena Stidham has transformed a once-dreary corner of the Keith A. Campbell Memorial Library on Joint Base San Antonio-Fort Sam Houston into a smorgasbord of international destinations.

Stidham is an accidental artist. Although she'd studied design, art and architecture at Miami Dade College, Stidham hadn't considered stepping outside of her mainstream job until after being laid off. She then turned to her first passion as a profession.

With the encouragement of family and friends, she began her career as a muralist.

"It was almost like a miracle to me," Stidham said. "I was sad, but then I was forced to act and now I am glad."

Her husband, Tony Stidham, came to the San Antonio Military Medical Muralist Malena Stidham.

Center as an epidemiologist last November. Wanting to wait until the end of the school year to relocate to San Antonio, she still lives in Miami with their son.

However, not one to leave her career to chance, she approached supervisory librarian Robbye Durham with an offer that couldn't be refused.

Armed with her portfolio, "she actually came to our door," Durham said. "Malena wanted to commit to a service project.

She wanted to be able to show her work and share it."

They discussed different subjects and at one point Durham mentioned that JB-SA-Fort Sam Houston hosts people from all over the world. An idea took root and Stidham returned to Miami, researched the topic and sent Durham a concept.

"We loved it," Durham said. The only thing needed was the paint.

"So, I'm doing the paint," Durham said. "That's my service project."

Over the course of her son's spring break, Stidham has converted the young adult section of the library into a destination of interest.

When asked how their customers react to the mural taking form, Durham answered, "Awe. They're just in awe about how beautiful it is and how the colors are so vibrant and welcoming when they walk in."

Partnership for Youth Success program to pay off for Soldiers

By Bart Keyes
U.S. Army San Antonio
Recruiting Battalion

The Corpus Christi Police Department recently joined with the U.S. Army San Antonio Recruiting Battalion through the "Partnership for Youth Success" program at CCPD headquarters March 1.

The PaYS program guarantees Soldiers a job interview and possible employment after they leave the Army.

The program provides America's youth with an opportunity to serve their country while they prepare for their future, as Soldiers possess technical skills, work ethic, discipline, teamwork, communication and leadership ability – all traits desirable to potential employers.

The CCPD joins the Nueces County Police Department as the second organization to partner with the recruiting battalion's Corpus Christi Company within the last year.

"The CCPD is hiring and we are looking for highly qualified men and women to fill those positions," said CCPD Chief Floyd Simpson. "This partnership will do just that."

"On behalf of the U.S. Army, it is a pleasure to announce this partnership with the Corpus Christi Police Department," said battalion commander Lt. Col. David Grant. "This partnership represents the best in community involvement."

Grant said the CCPD and the Army share the same core values of loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor, integrity and personal courage.

"These are the values leaders are looking for in their employees and what makes this partnership so important," Grant added. "This is a win-win situation for both organizations."

"The CCPD has improved their hiring practices and this partnership couldn't have come at a better time," said CCPD Patrol Commander John Houston. "This partnership will allow us to hire outstanding men and women who will have many educational chances to hone their skills within the CCPD."

"This partnership is not a one-way street," Simpson added. "It is our hope that our officers within CCPD take advantage of all the benefits the Army Reserves offer."

TxDOT offering free cab vouchers for intoxicated Fiesta-goers

By Joey Palacios
Texas Public Radio

The Texas Department of Transportation is reviving its Fiesta Safe voucher program this year to offer free cab rides to intoxicated individuals.

San Antonio Police Chief William McManus echoed the words of other law enforcement agencies on catching drunk drivers.

"If you drink and drive, you're going to get caught," McManus said. "It's just a matter of when. When you do, it's going to cost you a lot of money and a lot of heartache."

Last year for Fiesta, 373 people were arrested for driving while intoxicated, and in both 2011 and 2012 there were no alcohol-related automobile fatalities.

To keep that number at zero, Robbie Smith, with the Texas Department of Transportation, is offering free cab rides up to $20 from Fiesta events.

"We want everyone to arrive home safely, and in doing that, that means sometimes you have to plan ahead," Smith said.

TxDOT previously used a vouchers system for the program, which is run by sponsorships. This year however, they're in the form of a debit card. Each one comes loaded with $20.

John Bouloubasis, president of Yellow Cab San Antonio said the cards will only be good for Yellow Cab and Towne Car taxis.

"What happens when a patron gets them, they're used in the same manner as a credit card in the cab," Bouloubasis said.

"They're good for $20 and then when they're done, when Fiesta is over, they can be re-loaded just simply by calling our office and they can be re-loaded to any dollar amount."

TxDOT representatives will be passing out the cards at Fiesta events.

The original $20 on the card will be good during Fiesta and only when leaving one of the events.
